Part 2: Word Cloud	Pts for Correct
Correctness: program prints out expected results for java WordCloud ~/../public/HW6/poems.txt 8 partial credit for trying. See code	10
Efficiency: program prints out expected results for java WordCloud ~/../public/HW6/allbooks.txt 10 java WordCloud ~/../public/HW6/allbooks.txt 200 and takes under 30 seconds. Partial credit for trying. See code	10
Clarity: Program flow is logical, clear, and easy to understand (comments and appropriate variable names will help). Your tutor can look through your code and easily understand how your program works because it's well documented, clear variable names, logically broken up. Range from 1-10 pts

Part 3: Style Requirements (10 points)
Description (Deduct up to Twice for Each Infraction up to 10 points)	Pts for Correct

-1 point for each missing class/file header (only has to be one or other, They don't need a file & class header)

-1 point for each missing method header. They must be in javadoc format. `/ */` with `@param` and `@return` if used in the method.

-2 point for no inline comments

-1 point for each meaningless variable name

-1 point for each hardcoded constant.

-2 point for no logical blank space separators

-1 point for each line over 80 characters

-1 point for each line indented incorrectly

-5 for submitting any file that isn't a .java, .class, .jar, .html (javadoc files). If they have allbooks.txt in their submission, then -5 points. When students submit these large files, it breaks down ieng6 for everyone else

Make sure you find all style errors and report them to your students, even if they have hit the 10 points deduction limit.

An example of how to deduct points. Let's say there are 10 lines that go over 80 characters and everything else is great. They would loose 2 points total and get 8 pts for style

Large files:

-5 for submitting any file that isn't a .java, .class, .jar, or .html (javadoc file).
E.g. if they have allbooks.txt in their submission, then -5 points. When students submit these large file it breaks down ieng6 for everyone else
